From The Pastor's Desk

In Christ,

There is an old maxim in the Church. Lex orandi, lex credendi – “The law of prayer is the law of belief.” This says something about our current crisis of belief in the Church. New research from the Pew Research Center indicates that only 26% of US Catholics under the age of 40 believe in the Real Presence of Jesus in the Eucharist. According to the study, “nearly seven-in-ten Catholics (69%) say they personally believe that during Catholic Mass, the bread and wine used in Communion ‘are symbols of the body and blood of Jesus Christ.’ Just one-third of U.S. Catholics (31%) say they believe that ‘during Catholic Mass, the bread and wine actually become the body and blood of Jesus.’”

It cannot be overstated how bad this is. The Eucharist is the most important thing we have as Catholics. It is the fundamental and most central belief we have in how we live as Christians. Some might think that other things are more important, like care for the poor and needy. The Second Vatican Council refers to the Eucharist as the “Source and summit of the Christian life.” Anything good we do comes from and leads back to the Eucharist. But only because of what, or Who, it is. It is Jesus. Not symbolically, but really. Flannery O’Conner famously said, “Well, if it’s a symbol, to hell with it.” Acts of charity and the social teaching of the Church are important, but only in regards to how they relate to our relationship with Jesus, who gives himself to us Eucharistically. St. Maximilian Kolbe wrote that “everything other than God has value to the degree that it is referred to him, the maker of all and our own redeemer, the final end of all things.” If we do not understand the way in which God comes to us, in the flesh and blood of Jesus Christ, in the Eucharist, then nothing else good has any value, because good things only have value in regard to their relationship with Him. This includes even doing good works for the poor.

Some Church leaders will act shocked at this finding, and wring their hands as they wonder how we failed so badly at catechesis. They are already saying how this is a failure on the part of teachers and catechists, and their priests, in teaching young people in Catholic schools and PSR programs. This is all untrue. This is not as much a catechetical failure as it is a liturgical one. Lex orandi, lex credendi. If our ritual and liturgical worship looks like we believe that God in the flesh is really and truly present in the Eucharist, then more people will believe it. And if we act like the Mass is an opportunity for self-gratification of attention starved clerics, sentimentalism to warm the hearts of Lifetime movie loving housewives, and a community gathering to sing about how we are all one big happy family and everyone gets a part in the production – then we’ll believe the Eucharist is anything other than the God of the Universe, making himself present in a sacrificial offering for the salvation of our sin ridden souls.

No. The answer is not just better catechesis. That might help, but it is not all. We have to offer the Mass in such a way that professes what we are supposed to believe. This means that the Eucharist ought to be treated with extreme care. It means using only the finest of vessels and vestments. It means approaching with extreme reverence – as was once done, when people actually believed, and their approach to the Eucharist displayed that as they knelt on their knees and received him who created them on their tongue. This means spoken prayer be said directed towards God with humility instead of like a stage actor reading from a script for the audience. This means that only the unworthy but still chosen and consecrated hands of clerics distribute the Blessed Sacrament. This means the music be less reminiscent of a show tune or campfire, and more like a heavenly sacrifice. Put simply, if more people are going to believe in the Eucharist, we have to pray like we believe it.

Fr. Todd Lloyd
